WORKSHOP (COMMUNICATION)

The Journal of Academic Literacy and Research Skills (JALRS): Unique Opportunity for Writers

If you have some ideas to communicate to the readers of the journal, choose a specially designed workshop to develop your skills of writing for publication. The objective of the workshop is to help potential journal authors to shape up your journal publication.

Moderator: Svetlana Suchkova

Program:

Introduction to the JARLS scope, requirements, and submission procedure.

Drafting your article to meet the journal requirements – participants individual work.

Trying the text on the readers: guided peer review – pair work.

Strategies for text editing – Svetlana Suchkova

Q&A session – Svetlana Suchkova, Elena Bazanova, Mark Krzanawski, Robert Cote

Workshop pre-requisite

Bring a draft of your potential article. You may also want to bring your own mobile device.

Speaking of Ideas: How to talk to anybody about your complicated research (COMMUNICATION)

Take a challenge to communicate your complex research ideas to people outside your field. It is your chance to share ideas and highlight the impact of your investigation on the society. Prepare to give a ten-minute presentation and answer questions about your research.

Selection Requirements

To participate in the Research Story Telling Competition you have to

- register on the site
- write a synopsis of your research results in a plain language to make it accessible to lay people (500 words)
- write a short bio, indicating your institution, topic of interest, and how and why you have chosen it

A surprise is there for the winner!
